

Year Five in Your Newspaper

A Rural Health News Service Series

Beginning September 2016, this newspaper in partnership with the Nebraska Press
Association Foundation, and a dozen other state press associations
along with the support of a grant from The Commonwealth Fund will provide year five of the nation's Rural Health News Services series.

National health reporters will create bi-weekly news stories, some with important graphics, to help all of us better understand the health issues in our community, state and nation.

The goal is to provide unbiased, factual stories that you, the reader, can use, and this is our way to help your community address important health care issues.

We welcome your comments and ideas about this continued project, which will continue for a year or more with your support.

The Commonwealth Fund is a national, private foundation based in New York City that supports independent research on health care issues and makes grants to improve health care practice and policy. The views presented by this project's writers are those of the authors and not necessarily those of the Commonwealth Fund directors, or staff nor those of the Nebraska Press Association Foundation.
